Ray works directly with financial advisors, accounting and legal professionals to bring personal, business & estate planning strategies from concept to closure. With carrier and product-neutral insurance solutions, Ray gives the financial advisor and their clients an objective analysis on optimum choices. Ray can develop and close even the most complex wealth transfer cases, and has helped implement top-notch plans for business owners. Ray's career began in 1993, in the Columbia area where he brought major insurance carrier products and insurance solutions to front-line representatives of local financial institutions. In 2010, he merged his practice, Hunt Financial Group, with Dixon Wells and became the principal of the Columbia office. He believes constant education and communication are vital and is available for point-of-sale, group workshops, CE-credit courses, and client seminars. Ray has been training independent insurance professionals in the estate planning, wealth transfer and business succession planning for over 18 years.

Ray is extremely active in his local, state and national professional associations and holds a General Insurance license in addition to his LUTCF and CLTC designations.
