

Larry Quinlan is a principal at Deloitte LLP and serves as the Global Chief Information Officer (CIO) for Deloitte – one of the world’s largest professional services organizations with over 170,000 people in 140 countries around the world. Larry sits on the US Executive Committee and chairs the global CIO Council.

As CIO, Larry has responsibility for all facets of technology including strategy, applications, infrastructure, support, and execution. He leads the worldwide technology organization.

Larry has been with Deloitte since 1988 and has served in a variety of leadership roles, including Global CIO for Deloitte Consulting LLP and National Managing Principal for Process Excellence. As Process Excellence leader, Larry led the US enterprise-wide effort to increase margins and effectiveness through continuous process improvement using the Lean Six Sigma methodology.

Larry holds an MBA from Baruch College, City University of New York.

Larry has been widely quoted including in major publications including the Wall Street Journal and InformationWeek and has also spoken at major events. He has been honored by institutions and publications including Computerworld (2007 Premier 100 IT Leaders), Harlem YMCA (2000), and Black MBA Magazine (2005 Top 50 Under 50).

Larry currently serves on the Boards or Councils of NPower, Nashville Technology Council, BDPA Education & Technology Foundation, W.E.B. Du Bois Society and the National Foundation for Teaching Entrepreneurship (NY).