

The James Family Home

See the History

Nestled in a wooded valley in western Missouri is an old log and clapboard house where a legend was born. Thousands have come from all over the world to visit this site, remember their heritage, and touch history.

Jesse James and his brother, Frank, were two of Missouri's most famous sons, whose characters were undoubtedly molded by the turbulent years marking the bloody decade preceding the Civil War. During the War, their reputations as guerrilla fighters grew while serving with William C. Quantrill and Bloody Bill Anderson.

Cultural icons and legends in their own time, Jesse and Frank James have become the custodians of America's Wild West legacy. Even though Jesse was shot and killed in 1882, fascination with his life and times lives on. Today, the humble farm where the James family lived, draws thousands of visitors and is open year round.

Be a Friend

In 1981 Friends of the James Farm was formed as a non-profit organization to restore and promote the farm. You can become a part of this historic adventure when you join Friends of the James Farm. Your membership supports preservation and development. You will also have the chance to attend the annual reunion and meet others who share your enthusiasm for this exciting time in American history.

Hear the Story

The James log cabin farmhouse, built in 1822, has witnessed many generations of James family history. It was to this isolated cabin that the Reverend Robert James brought his young wife Zerelda and young son Frank in 1845. This is where Jesse was born in 1847 and years later, Union soldiers seeking the whereabouts of Frank James, beat Jesse and tortured his stepfather Dr. Reuben Samuel by repeatedly hanging him from a tree in the front yard. In 1875 a Pinkerton "bomb" killed their half-brother Archie and severed Zerelda's right arm.

Jesse James

a fine example of frontier architecture, one of the best and oldest structures still standing. Today the farm is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

The James Farm Museum opened in 1988. For a modest fee, visitors enjoy guided house tours, self-guided museum tours, and a documentary film about the James family by Wide Awake Films, LLC. The museum is a member of the American Associations of Museums and the American Association of State and Local History.

Join the Gang

For your contribution you will receive our quarterly newsletter and an invitation to the annual reunion, plus a single free admission to the museum. You also have the satisfaction of knowing that you helped preserve one of Missouri's oldest historic sites.
