The pattern forming on SPY appears to be a Head and Shoulders pattern where the late February and early March lows are the Head and the Left Shoulder is the January low and Right Shoulder is the April low. The pattern looks symmetric which adds to the credibility. To keep the symmetry of this potential Head and Shoulders bottom, the market would need to show strength shortly; otherwise the symmetry would be lost. It's worth noting, if April Option expiration week is down (it was down 2.13%) (Happens 10 times last 30 years) the next week (this week) is up 100% of the time. Today's rally gives this statement hope. Join us at @OrdOracle

We updated this chart from yesterday, we said yesterday, “Significant lows are made when the NYSE McClellan Oscillator falls below -300 (capitulation) then rallies to +200 (sign of Strength). The NYSE Summation index is in the bottom window. We got this setup at the end of March. To confirm an intermediate term up trend, the NYSE Summation index needs to turn up from below -700 (check) and then rally to +1000. Currently the Summation index stands at -185. Usually the duration of the Summation index low below -700 to +1000 is around two months. The low in the Summation index came on March 10, so around May 10 the Summation index ideally should be above +1000 which is about 3 ½ weeks away. If the Summation index fails to break above +1000 level (or at least close to +1000) around May 10, than the market failed to show strength off of a significant low and would be an intermediate term bearish sign. Therefore its important for the market to show strength right now and continue to show strength for the next 3 or 4 weeks.” Today’s rally was a good start and needs to continue for the next 3 to push the Summation index up near +1000. There is no cause for concern right now, but when the Bullish Percent index for the Gold miner's index hits 100%; the last two times, GDX was at an intermediate term top. The Bullish percent index is setting at 83% (83% of the stocks in the Gold miners index are on a Point and Figure buy signal). The chart above goes back 2008 and shows all the history for the bullish percent index. According to our indicators which you have seen in our reports, the bull market has further to go both in time and price, but when the Bullish Percent index gets to 100% the market will be due for a rest.
